Vision in White

In the modern marriage celebration, the only thing that truly needs to be white is your smile. In fact, if there's one beauty treatment every bride must undergo, it's dental whitening. It's just not acceptable for your grin to match that champagne tulle or creamy lace confection. And if your gown is as pure as the driven snow, all the more reason for your pearly whites to be.

"Get a professional cleaning followed by whitening," Richard Thomas, DMD, of Dental Designs of Savannah, advises brides. "The cleaning allows us to remove external stains from the teeth, and the whitening removes stains that have collected inside the tooth structure."

Depending on your dentist, the procedure can take place over a week of daily treatments in the comfort of your home, or in just a few hours with the help of a special light.

For brides with a few more improvements in mind, Thomas suggests cosmetic contouring or bonding to correct minor chips and fractures and porcelain veneers to correct misalignment.

The cost of whitening ranges from $300 to $1,200—a small price to pay when you think of all those smiling pictures.
