TASTING/ honey

• With notes that range from flowery to earthy, honey comes in several forms besides the clear amber stuff you know so well. Here are the best ways to savor such complex sweetness, along with delicious ideas that go far beyond a cup of tea (see page 36). //

FROM P. 35

1/ COMB

The Savannah Bee Company Honeycomb
Honeycomb (the wax cells built by honeybees) is sweet and pleasantly chewy; this one has smooth floral flavors. Try a slice of honeycomb on a cheese plate—it's especially good with Jack, cheddar, and blue. $19 for 10 ounces; 912-234-0688 or savannahbee.com

2/ RAW

Really Raw Honey
Unprocessed honey contains bits of propolis (what bees use as sealant for the hive), honeycomb, and pollen that add chewy texture. It's earthy, creamy, and full flavored. Dab some on a grilled cheese sandwich, or whisk it into a vinaigrette. $12 for 1 pound; 800-732-5729 or reallyraahoney.com

3/ VARIETAL

J. P. Berger Lavender Honey
Varietal honey results when bees gather nectar from a particular type of blossom (like lavender). This one is intensely floral and delightfully tangy; great drizzled over Greek yogurt or vanilla ice cream. $19 for 14.4 ounces; 800-596-0885 or chefshop.com

4/ FLAVORED Sabatino Tartufi White Truffle Honey

Truffles and honey are a heavenly match—who knew? Try this heady stuff on goat cheese crostini, or stir it into a pan sauce for seared beef, pork, or chicken. $34 for 8.8 ounces; 800-221-7714 or deandeluca.com

5/ CREAMED

D'Arbo Clover Honey
Creamed (or whipped) honey is opaque and spreadable. This one has a silky texture, perfumy aroma, and caramel flavors. Smear some on whole grain toast. $12 for 1.1 pounds; 877-446-8763 or igourmet.com —AMY ALBERT
